JOB PRINTING.

Book and Job Printing of every description neatly executed. Terms, cash on delivery of the STATES' NEWS. Owing to more pressing local matters we have neglected to give our customary review of the civil war in the States. On turning over the news received by the Jonathan. Anderson, and Sierra Nevada, the whole tenor of it seems to be decidedly adverse to period so strong signs of the Federals sucthe Confederates, and as strongly in favor of the Federals. When Lee crossed the Potomac we predicted that as a military manœuvre it was a doubtful one, as it wascalculated to arouse the whole of the Free States to hurl back the invader; and it was rency at 25 per cent. discount-low apparent that if his military operations were not as successful as he desired, it would injure the prestige of Confederate arms both be gaining such new force and determination at home and abroad. The accumulated in telligence that has reached us, leaves no can satiate them. We shall wait anxiously doubt on that subject. Lee's raid is a fail- to see what course the Confederates will ure both in a military and a political point of adopt to recover their lost position. There view. The abdication of Hooker and in- is one point in the recent news on which the stallation of Mende in the command of the agree-that is in their barbarous and inhu-Federal army, has brought about the same result at Gettysburg that the removal of Pope and the restoration of McClellan did at Antietam-the Confederates have been defeated-put to the rout-forced to leave Mary land where no rising of secessionists occurred, and Pennsylvania, where little military glory has been acquired. The Federals may justly be proud of driving the heroic Lee from their soil a second time. The world may observe that Lee as a General fighting on the offensive is not the renowned General Lee fighting on the defensive. If Burnside and Hooker have been defeated on the Rappahannock when trying to drive the Confederates before them. Lee has likewise been beaten, and beaten twice in the field-where nothing but impromptu fortifications could be had. The military capacity of the Federals in the open field is thus proven equal to the victorious soldiery of Lee; and if any thing deserve more credit, inasmuch as they had been so often defeated and disappointed, that it must have required the nerve of desperation and an unconquerable obstinacy to oppose the victorious legions of the South. The Feder als have fought well on their own soil, whils the long-talked-of aggressive warfare of the Confederates has proved a failure. The conquest of the North by a Southern army is a hopeless project. On the other hand the successes-the very moderate successes-of th Federals in Virginia appear the brighter by the comparison with the Confederate advance and retreat into and from Maryland and Penn sylvania. We can foresee no military advantage, no political gain, to the Confederates by Lee's raid. He has only insured the security of the Free States. Henceforth they will fear less and less an aggressive war -an invasion of their soil - and with every campaign of the Confederates have less cause to fear. Without entering into the numbers engaged in the fights on both sides, nor considering the losses in killed, wounded and prisoners-it is manifest that the Federals possess the courage and ability to protect their soil, and preserve the line of the Potomac. Such has been the EMBROIDERED and CLOTH CAPES boast of the Confederates hitherto. They have driven the Federals step by step to the The Potomac is the boundary line: whoever crosses it seems to meet with

Northern obstinacy be soon a match for Southern valor. When Lee first crossed the Potomac, we had news that a special dispatch boat with another general had been sent to Charleston. It was easy to foresee an attack there from that movement, the object of which was to distract the attention of the Confederates in Maryland. The Jonathan brings news from Charleston. Great successes have been gained there, and in all probability the gain will continue on the side of the Federals. Either Charleston has to fall, or a large force of the Confederates on the Potomac weakening Lee in opposing Meade. But this is not all. The Federals have been planting

How Federal combinations will work out, is a matter for the future historian. But if Lee's army is greatly reduced by his raid, and America has been committed on Meade is the general that the Federals have my premises, the numbers of been searching for so long, a deadly blow which are known to me and for may yet be struck in Virginia at the supre. | the recovery whereof a Reward

Southern Indiana; that scattered through Kentucky and Tennessee are small bodies of Confederate troops; that on the Missouri-Arkansas line there is a small Confederate force; yet the great centres in the South West are now in Federal hands. Vicksourg after a brave resistance has fallen. We foresaw the improbability of its holding out except it could be succored from Arkansas or by Johnson. But as the Confederates dare not weaken Bragg's army so as to allow Rosecrans to push on to Chattanooga, the fall of Vicksburg seemed from former news only a matter of time. But on the heels of WILSON & MILES the fall of Vicksburg comes intelligence of the fall of Port Hudson. That opens the Mississippi. That cuts the Confederacy from North to South. That opens trade between the Northwestern States and the Gulf of Mexico. That will pacify these States; that will cut off all communication of a substantial character between Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Missouri-between the Con- Sherry, (Duff, Gordon & Co.'s) in federates West and their brethren on the East bank of the Mississippi.

It was a great achievement for the Federals, Scotch & Irish Whisky, do. an immense loss to the Confederates. Al- Holland Gin, though Johnson, McGruder, and Breckinridge, possess considerable forces in the rear of Vicksburg and Port Hudson, yet the large armies of Grant and Banks set free by their conquests, will soon precipitate themselves upon these Confederate forces and overwhelm them. Bragg has already foreseen this result, by crossing the Tennessee at Bridge-port, and pushing down to Atlanta, in central Georgia, leaving Rosecrans to move on to Chattanooga. The Federals are thus gaining a great foothold in the Southern countryvery vitals of the South. With the which at high water they can move their transports and gunboats; if they once es; tablish themselves at Chattanooga, it will take all the power of the South to expel them; and even all their power may be unequal to the task. For at that point the distance from Port Royal is not so far but what a line of military communication may be opened between the Atlantic and Rosecrans' army and between Chattanooga and Mobile via the Alabama river, thus cutting up the Confederacy into fractions. Such plans are of a gigantic character; but they must make part of any scheme for the conquest of the South, Federal plans have been all along developing themselves in this direction, with the same object in view, and we must say that since the fall of Fort Donelson and the series of Confederate defeats following it, down to the present time, we have observed at no ceeding in their designs as we do now. Neither a hostile country, summer heats, deadly fevers, nor slaughtered thousands, seems to stop the North in their advance into it has been for a long period-with a new that nothing but the conquest of the South rioters in New York, and Texans in Louisisna Proceeded safely as far as the passage entering up Bentinck Arm, and in going up took the wrong passage. After proceeding about 10 miles up, suddenly came upon an old Indian fort and on getting close to this fort discovered a signal on the shore about a mile to the left.

The signal appeared to be a boat's sail welling, at a cost of $6,000.

The population of Williams Creek is 3,500. This figure may be relied upon, having been obtained from the best authority. There were about 200 men out of work on the creek. The Tyhee, a tall man, dressed in white man's clothes, accompanied by another Siwash also well dressed, then came down and called out several times in English, "Come ashore! come ashore!" The party replied that they were going to leave as they felt alarmed. He said in Chenook, "If you go away my young men will come after you and kill the whole of you. The party waited for some time, expecting that Wilson, if alive, would shout or make a signal, but nothing was heard; and fearing the appearance of other canoes, the party of miners, now reduced to four, pulled away for Fort Rupert, and after several days rowing they overtook the canoe Austria, about 20 miles from Fort Rupert.

The only information published in relation to her destination, was published in relation to her destination, that she steered westward. The following notice was posted, on June 8, in the Underwriters' Rooms in Liverpool:

A letter has been received here from an officer on board the rebel steamer Japan, late the Virginia, stating that she was about to sail for the Straits of Sunda. sail for the Straits of Sunda.

If the statements here made be correct, the Japan, or Virginia, ought to have made her appearance, long ago, in the China Seas.
The Straits of Sunda are between the islands of Sumatra and Java. Through them all vessels coming round the Cape of Good Hope sail, on their way to the Chinese Sea. The place from which the rebel officer wrote is not given It is worthy of remark in this place from which the rebel officer wrote is not given. It is worthy of remark, in this connection, that we had files of papers from Hongkong, on Tuesday, up to the 29th of May, but no mention is made in them of the appearance of a pirate anywhere. All things considered, it might be just as well to retain a vessel-of-war in this port just now. There is no harm in being prepared for emergencies.—S. F. Alla, July 16th.

The Consul stated that there were mines in the States of Sina-loa, Sonora, Durango, and Lower California, but none in the State of Guerrere, and that if the Collector should receive satisfactory proof from reliable persons that the powder was to be used for mining purposes only in the States first mentioned, that he would the States first mentioned, that he would withdraw his protest, as he did not desire to embarrass any purely mining or ordinary mercantile business. He added that he had no power to enforce his protest, but if it were disregarded that it would be looked at as an unfriendly act and hostile to the interests of untriendly act and hostile to the interests of France. The result was, that the Collector determined that the powder should not be shipped to Acapulco anyhow, nor to other Mexican ports, if satisfactory assurances were not received from responsible parties that it was intended for mining uses only. The powder has since been returned to the magazine. We understand that the charterers. We understand that the charterers when applied to, were unwilling to give the name of the intended shipper, which unwillingness is deemed a very suspicious circumstance as connected with its shipment to a port where no mining requirements for the article are said to exist.—S.
